

Klaus Zepuntke - Talk

The courage to listen and to ask the right questions

60% of our communication consists of listening, and we are increasingly losing this ability. Why?
Active listening redefined!

In this illustrative talk, Klaus Zepuntke shows us how to radically question our self-image of being a good listener. What prerequisites do we need simply to be present in conversation with our partner, children, friends, colleagues, superiors and customers? You will come away from this talk with a refreshingly new view of active listening.

How about coming from a meeting feeling inspired and ready to implement the agreed to do's, rather than hectically rushing off to the next meeting? How about a meaningful conversation with your loved one.

In accompanying many of his clients in shadow-coaching processes, Klaus Zepuntke has become familiar with the meeting cultures of various companies and industries. What do they have in common? People and their inability to simply listen to each other. He has also experienced this in his private milieu.

Sound familiar? - Then simply come and listen...

Coach – Speaker – Facilitator

Klaus Zepuntke, executive and personal coach in Europe and North America, has been serving clients for almost 30 years in various industries. He accompanies and supports companies in organizational change processes and private clients in personal change processes.

Today his clients benefit directly from the experience he has gained in working internationally across industries. He has developed the ability to “listen” to what is not said and reflects this back to clients. What is not said or what a corporate or private client avoids mentioning often points to the real issue in need of attention. This is not always the same as the issue initially presented.

The KLAZEPT Concept is the basis of his coaching; his clients benefit from his clarity and directness, free of any frills.

Klaus Zepuntke supports his clients in deepening their self-knowledge to enable them to reach their change objectives authentically with sustainable benefits.

Klaus Zepuntke is the founder and managing director of KLAZEPT Coaching & Consulting.

All KLAZEPT services are offered in English and German.
